

Jill Kesler | Senior Program Manager

Jill Kesler joined CHAD in August 2013. She is an experienced business professional, having served as an international recruiter, manager, and small business owner in various industries. Jill's role at CHAD is to plan, implement, facilitate, and supervise special program activities for outreach and enabling services in coordination and collaboration with navigators and community, state, and federal partner organizations. She serves as the project director for the CMS Navigator cooperative agreement, which connects communities that historically have experienced lower access to health coverage and greater disparities in health outcomes.

In addition, Jill manages the subcontract with the University of Washington to serve the Mountain West AIDS Education and Training Center (MWAETC) mission to deliver innovative education and training to improve access to care and quality of life for people who are living with or at-risk for acquiring HIV.

Jill has volunteered as a court-appointed special advocate (CASA) for abused and neglected children and at HorsePower, providing equine therapy to individuals with physical, emotional, and/or cognitive challenges. She also sat on the board of directors for Ten Thousand Villages. Jill graduated with a bachelor's degree in business administration from Southwest Minnesota State University and lives with her husband in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.
